

ABSTRACT

A high-frequency measuring system is provided for measuring a test device with a measuring device unit and 5 at least one high-frequency module connected to the measuring device unit. Each high-frequency module is located spatially separated from the measuring device unit and is connected to the measuring device unit via a digital interface.